

Not all used cars are the same...

A 300 point check list is only as good as the wording of the questions, for example Tyres:

- The tread depth is only one aspect which requires consideration.
- The wear pattern across the width of the tyre, the age of the tyre and the condition of the sidewall are just as important.
- The MOT test has a very low standard when it comes to tyres.
- Also the ability of the inspector is a factor.

Car supermarkets and online sellers make a big thing of their inspections covering hundreds of points but most DO NOT DO THEIR OWN INSPECTIONS. This is subcontracted to a "Prep Centre" which can comprise a tent on a disused airfield.

- The process is run on a production line basis with unskilled staff employed on a casual basis to do most of the work.
- Generally there is no road test to assess the workings of the mechanical features.
- NO SERVICE WORK IS CARRIED OUT.

WHAT WE DO at Howlett of Lavenham

- We look at the service history forensically, a stamp in a book proves very little.
- We look at the recommended service content both in mileage and vehicle age and compare it with the service records the car has in the service book, invoices and digital records, we then compare this with the condition of the car itself.
- The service we give the car is the tailored to that car to bring up to date for current requirements of the car plus any historical short falls.
- All our cars have a minimum of a 5 mile road test driven under a variety of conditions.

That's what makes the difference
